Debit card as a payment method

25/11/2025

Most banks in Germany issue debit cards, including Sparkassen, Volks- und Raiffeisenbanken, Commerzbank, Consorsbank, Postbank, and HypoVereinsbank, as well as online banks like DKB, ING, and Comdirect.

Debit cards are linked to a checking account and debit the account immediately.

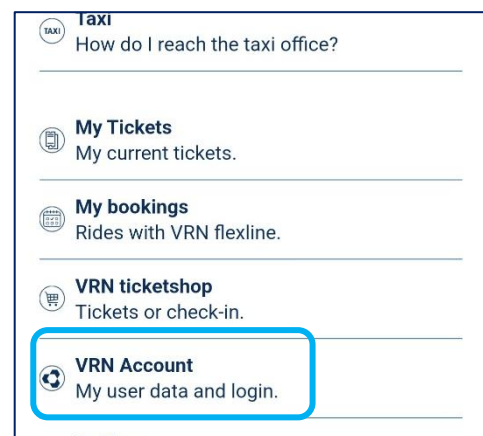

Most debit cards today are either a Girocard, a Debit Mastercard, or a Visa Debit and always display the word "Debit" on the front or back of the card, along with a card number, an expiration date, a security code (CVC), and the cardholder's name.

Some banks require a one-time activation of the debit card for online payments. Information on the necessity and procedure can be obtained from the card-issuing bank.

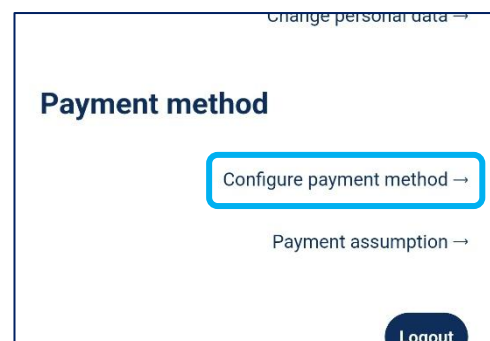

Step 1: Log in to your VRN account

To add a payment method, you must first log in to your VRN account. To do this, click on "VRN Account" and log in with your email address and username.

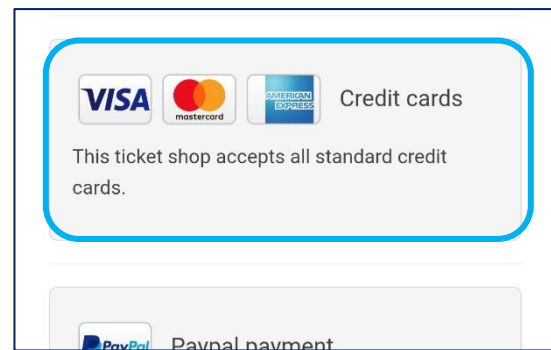

Step 2: Configure payment method

To add your debit card as a payment method in the myVRN app, it must be enabled for online payments. On the "VRN Account" page, select "Configure payment method".

Step 3: Select debit card

Then click on the box labeled "Credit cards".

Step 4: Enter card details

Now enter the card number, the expiry date, the security code (CVC), and the cardholder's name, and confirm the information by clicking the "Save Payment Method" button.

The "3D Secure" security procedure will then be used to authenticate the cardholder during registration. This requires two factors known only to the cardholder. The exact procedure depends on the card-issuing bank (e.g., PIN/TAN entry). Furthermore, the card-issuing bank is obligated to perform authentication for every purchase. The method is determined by the card-issuing bank.
